SBA Disaster Loan Outreach Centers in Louisville Remain Open Monday through Saturday

ATLANTA – The U.S. Small Business Administration reminds disaster victims that the Disaster Loan Outreach Centers located in Louisville at the African-American Heritage Center and the South Louisville Community Center are still open. SBA representatives remain available six days a week to assist loan applicants.

If the SBA issued you a SBA disaster loan application, complete and return it prior to the October 13 deadline, even if you do not want a loan. If the SBA is not able to approve a home loan, they may refer you to FEMA for possible grant assistance.

Homeowners, renters, businesses and non-profit organizations of all sizes in Jefferson County, Kentucky, are eligible to apply for physical disaster loans. SBA disaster loans are for uninsured disaster losses.

The SBA urges those affected by the severe storms and flooding that affected Jefferson County on August 4, 2009, to visit the Centers to obtain one-on-one assistance and information about the disaster assistance program. The Disaster Loan Outreach Center locations and hours of operation are:
