SBA Economic Injury Loan Deadline is November 8; Wisconsin Small Businesses May Still Apply

ATLANTA - The U.S. Small Business Administration is reminding small businesses that November 8 is the filing deadline for federal economic injury disaster loans that are available in Douglas County in Wisconsin. The SBA declared a disaster due to excessive rainfall, flooding, unseasonably cool temperatures, frost, freezes and drought that occurred from April 1 – Dec. 31, 2009.

“This county is eligible because it is contiguous to one or more primary counties in Minnesota. SBA recognizes that disasters do not usually stop at county or state lines. For that reason, counties adjacent to primary counties named in the declaration are included,” said Frank Skaggs, director of SBA’s Field Operations Center East in Atlanta.

“When the Secretary of Agriculture issues a disaster declaration to help farmers recover from damages and losses to crops, the Small Business Administration issues a declaration to eligible entities affected by the same disaster,” said Skaggs.

Under this declaration, the SBA’s Economic Injury Disaster Loan program is available to eligible farm-related and nonfarm-related entities that suffered financial losses as a direct result of this disaster. Farmers and ranchers are not eligible to apply to SBA, but nurseries are eligible to apply for economic injury disaster loans for losses caused by drought conditions.

Small businesses and non-profit organizations may qualify for loans up to $2 million. These loans are available at a 4 percent interest rate with terms up to 30 years. The SBA determines eligibility based on the applicant’s size, type of activity and financial resources. Loan amounts and terms are based on each applicant’s financial condition. Borrowers may use these working capital loans to pay fixed debts, payroll, accounts payable and other bills that they could have paid had the disaster not occurred. The loans are not intended to replace lost sales or profits.
